We can also convert the existing forged camshafts with the chilled cast camshafts. Unlike the forged camshafts the wear prone area's on camlobes on camshafts are hardened during the casting process it and do not need any induction hardening etc. The chilled camshafts offer low machining stocks, good lubricating properties and more consistency in hardness at the wear prone area's with high depth of hardness.”

“Global Meltdown & Its Impact on Indian Economy”

February 06, 2009

by Prof. B.S. Patel

An important discussion was carried out by Prof. B.S. Patel on “Global Meltdown”. He said, upheaval in global equity markets was just a couple of days old and the weight of opinion was that it was going to be just a blip in an otherwise stable global economic environment. All of the Asian emerging economies had developed significant defensive capabilities against a global market meltdown, mainly by virtue of their massive foreign exchange reserves, the unknown nature of global portfolio linkages prevalent today made it impossible to assess how significant the risks really were and how a relatively small shock might transmit through the system.

The developments of the last couple of weeks, during which a major French bank was rocked by its large exposures to the US sub-prime market, reinforce the sense of things being worse than they appear at first.

“Process of Management”

February 12, 2009

by Mr. Rakesh Pandey

Mr. Rakesh Pandey gave very informative presentation on process management. He explained that Process Management is the ensemble of activities of planning and monitoring the performance of a process. Especially in the sense of business process, often confused with reengineering. Sometimes, process management includes reengineering or reengineering includes process management.

Process Management is the application of knowledge, skills, tools, techniques and systems to define, visualize, measure, control, report and improve processes with the goal to meet customer requirements profitably. Some people said that it is different from program management in that program management is concerned with managing a group of inter-dependent projects. But from another view point, process management includes program management. ISO 9001 promotes the process approach to managing an organization.
